Dispassionate and Courteous Southern Comments on the Message.

Marshfield Again Prostrated by a Cyclone.

The Story of Old Mother Morey Revived.

Omaha Visited by a Destructive Fire.

GENERAL NEWS.

Marshfield Once More Afflicted

ST LOUIS, December 7.—A cyclone passed over the section of country yesterday near [illegible]thage, destroying the fences and a few farm houses No lives were lost except that of Mr [illegible]mby, who was fatally injured At Sarcoxie the storm raged with great fury. A blacksmith shop was totally destroyed The Masonic hall was twisted off of its foundation and destroyed Many other buildings were badly damaged and fences and out houses carried away A prairie school house was destroyed, and even the stone foundation carried away for several rods The house of John McCoy, near by, was lifted off its foundation Mrs Newman's house was blown down and her two little girls fatally injured. The timber in the course of the storm was all torn up The town of Marshfield, which was nearly destroyed last summer, was visited by this storm and great damage is said to have been done, and nearly all the northern part of the city blown down again. The storm was accompanied by thunder and lightning, the electric shocks being very violent.

Killed on the Rail

ATCHISON, December 7 —The regular passenger train on the Rock Island road last evening flew the track near Edgerton Junction, 23 miles out, on account of a broken rail. The mail agent, W R Syms, was burned to death [illegible] mail agent A G Beller had his shoulder dislocated and suffered a few other bruises.

MORE SERIOUS THAN SUPPOSED

ATCHISON, December 7 —Last night s accident on the Rock Island railway was more serious than was at first reported The entire train except the locomotive went down an embankment The baggage, express, and mail cars, two day cars and a sleeper ignited immediately and were destroyed The weather was intensely cold and the suffering is great The railroad officials are extremely reticent concerning details.

Some Samples of Southern Suavity.

CHICAGO, December 7 —The Times has a large number of editorial comments on the President's message of which the following extract from its Richmond dispatch is the most noteworthy Mr. Hayes libels the south in reference to the negroes. We need not stop to refute his false assertions on the subject nor take notice of his twaddle about the solid south He asserts what every man knows to be false when he pronounces the new amendment to the federal constitution to be the solemn expression of the will of the people He knows they were forced upon the people of the south The President revives the civil service humbug Of all men in the world he should be the last to touch this subject. He who allowed his officials to stump the country for Garfield. He who appointed scores of villains to office that aided in defrauding South Carolina and Louisiana out of their vote for president in 1876 [illegible] who allowed three several assessments to be made upon all the clerks, male and female, in all the departments of the government to [illegible] the rascals for cheating Hancock out of the presidency Mr Hayes is [illegible] say once [illegible] is a hypocrite He is a pretty fellow to [illegible] in his mouth on the subject of a divorce between congress and the president. The [illegible] on polygamy and [illegible] means of extirpating it recommends he [illegible] that [illegible] the southern states which can only be converted into territories as they were a few years ago The president says an army of 30,-[illegible]

Some More Morey

NEW YORK, December 7 —William T Howe, in the general sessions court to day, before Judge Ewing, made an application to have the indictments filed against Charles A Byrne, Joseph Hart and Louis Post, editors and publishers of the Truth, and Kenward Philp quashed on the ground of misjointure. His honor reserved his decision

The Panama Canal Subscriptions

SAN FRANCISCO, December 7. The subscriptions for the DeLesseps canal were opened at the Anglo-Californian Bank yesterday A good many people have called to make enquiries, including a number of Frenchmen, and a few small subscriptions have been received.

Washington News

GENERAL DRUM'S INFORMATION.

WASHINGTON, December 7.—Adjutant General Drum to-day received a dispatch from General Terry at St Paul, Minnesota, stating that he had received information from the camp on Poplar creek and from Fort Beckford, which indicated that Sitting Bull would probably soon come in and surrender

SUPREME COURT PROGRESS.

Since the opening of the present term of the supreme court of the United States it has made unusually rapid progress through the docket, and heard argument to day in the case number 123 At a date corresponding to this in December of last year only 95 cases had been reached in the regular call, so that the court in this term is twenty seven cases ahead of its last year's record Should the present rate of progress be maintained for the next two weeks, as it seems to be likely, a recess will be called for the Christmas holiday which would not ordinarily be reached earlier than the last of January or the first of February, and it is important that counsel in cases as high on the calendar as number 165 should have their briefs in readiness for submission before the 24th of the present month since they are very likely to be called for. There is no probability that any of the justices of the court will retire from the bench at present. It is understood that Justices Strong and Swain are both desirous of giving up their positions as soon as they can do so without leaving the court in a crippled condition, but the announcement of any particular date for their retirement is premature. It is more than probable that they will retain their seats until the end of the present term

CHANGES IN CONGRESSIONAL COMMITTEES

By changes made to day in the senate committee Blair succeeds Ingalls on the pension committee and Sharon on the education committee The senate decided to appoint select committees on civil service. Chairman on election laws. Harris, chairman on election frauds, Wallace, on Nicaragua claims, Hampton, Chairman on Freedmen's bank, Bruce, chairman on bill giving cabinet seats in house, Pendleton, chairman on library, Voorhees

The committees discontinued are Voorhees on negro exodus, Kirkwood on Cheyenne Indians

HOUSE DEBATE ON PRESIDENTIAL COUNT

The discussion in the house to-day as to whether a joint resolution on the electoral count was a question of privilege brought out sharply the two sides of the question really involved, the democrats holding that the house alone could judge whether a contingency had arisen which would demand of the house their counting of the vote for president and vice president, while the republicans, headed by Robeson, held that the house could not by appointing letters elect a president nor could it have created the contingency in which it claimed a right to count the votes, they could only be notified of such contingency by the senate If the president of the senate declared the president elected he is elected

Mr Reagan declared [illegible] senate was only the [illegible] houses, whereon Conger made an [illegible] argument, technical and [illegible] He argued that the speaker could only declare this a privilege question [illegible] revolutionary in itse The country had lately escaped revolution and was threatened again and again with the same thing

Mr Hooker replied to Mr Conger [illegible] the rule of precedents etc

Messrs Robeson Uplegraff, Wh[illegible] and others took part in the debate The latter asserted that the pending presidential election was in no way concerned in this matter Garfield had been elected by the people and he [illegible]

[illegible] The Senate [illegible] 34th congress [illegible] the 23d congress [illegible] taking no action [illegible] the senate declared there were no [illegible] in force The senate decided in the 44th congress [illegible] that the president of the senate [illegible] the vote The senate now sends this joint rule to take the place of the 22nd joint rule If the chair were to refuse on technicalities to allow an adjustment between the two houses as to the government of the house when in joint session such a proceeding must lead to chaos, confusion perhaps contention As far as the question of privilege strictly is concerned the chair is of the opinion that it makes no difference by whom the votes are counted. If done by the two houses, it is the highest duty they have to perform, one imposed directly by the constitution relating to the election of the president and vice president and the very existence of our form of government may depend upon it If counted by any other person it must be done in the presence of the two houses, and rules regulating a joint meeting are of the highest privilege affecting as they do the exercise of the most important function of the two houses. It is no competent for the house to make any rule which obstructs in any degree the execution of the terms of the constitution. The chair thereafter considers in view of past practices that this is a question of privilege.

SENATOR LAMAR SERIOUSLY ILL

The friends of Senator Lamar apprehend his health will not permit his attendance in the senate again He is said to be very feeble

MAKING A MILITARY POST.

Under directions from the secretary of war all ordnance, harness and timber stored at the Washington arsenal are being removed to New York and San Francisco preparatory to converting these grounds into a regular military post. One of the warehouses is to be converted into a large stable for artillery horses and the other warehouses are to be fitted up as quarters for troops The arsenal will be arranged for permanent barracks and headquarters Four companies of the second artillery and a light battery will be stationed here permanently and the former headquarters for that regiment of artillery companies at Fort McHenry will be transferred from Baltimore to the arsenal here, Colonel R B Byers will be in command at the arsenal Fort McHenry will be left in charge of a small force under Lieutenant Colonel A P Howard The idea of transferring headquarters from Fort McHenry to this city is that the troops may have more suitable grounds for drilling The proposed change it is understood, will be made as soon as the arsenal here has been made ready for United States troops from Norfolk, New York and other points which are ordered here to the inauguration They will be quartered at the arsenal and sent back as soon as the ceremonies are over

MCDONALD'S BILL.

Senator McDonald's bill for the taxation of legal tenders provides that any state or territory may include in the valuation of personal property any legal tenders owned or held by any person or corporation in assessing taxes and may tax them not more than the rate of taxes on gold and silver coin in the hands of individuals

BELFORD'S RESOLUTION

In the house Mr Belford offered a resolution directing the secretary of the interior to inform the house under what law or warrant of authority Douglass, sub chief of the Utes, is confined in the military prison at Fort Leavenworth, and what steps if any, are being taken by the United States to bring him to trial for alleged complicity in the Meeker murder The resolution was adopted

THE REFUNDING BILL

The ways and means committee unanimously resolved to allow the chairman to amend the refunding bill now before the house by inserting 3 per cent in lieu of 3½ as the interest, believing that 3 per cent bonds can be floated at par

B. W. STEELE,
Manager of the Gazette

The only democratic governor north of Mason and Dixon s line after January 1 will be the governor of New Jersey

Mr. Hayes may be called windy because of his long messages He can write short letters however In answer to an inquiry of Private Dalzell whether he was a candidate for the senate he made the laconic answer No

The Richmond Dispatch editorial on Hayes message is evidence that not all the south is reconciled to the new order of things It claims that the war amendments were not the will of the people but were forced on the south Such talk as this elected Garfield

The republicans have been accused of being in favor of carpet bag government In 1877 the democrats of New Jersey nominated a New Yorker, General McClellan. His term expires January 1 He has already engaged a house in New York in which to live. If the democrats of New Jersey can stand this policy, they should not object to a similar policy in the south.

General W. B. Hazen who has just been appointed at the head of the signal office was born in Vermont in 1830. He graduated from West Point in the class of 1855. He had some experience in fighting Indians in Texas before the war and was severely wounded by the Comanches. At the beginning of the war he raised the 41st Ohio regiment in which Mr. John Potter of this city served. During the war he won a brilliant reputation as a soldier, as shown by successive brevets from major to major general in the regular army. In 1870 he witnessed the battles in the Franco-Prussian war and on his return wrote a book which showed him to be an able military critic. He is justly esteemed as one of the most competent and best educated soldiers in the army and is well fitted for his new position.

We don't wish anyone ill, but still it may be a little satisfaction to know that we are not the only ones suffering from a short supply of coal We have looked longingly at the coal cars that have passed through here on their way to Denver and have complained that they did not stop To-day there seems to be far more inconvenience in Denver than in this city. The situation in Denver and the means of supply, is thus discussed in the Denver Times

"Denver is suffering from the effects of a coal famine. For four weeks, at least, there has not been enough coal in our city to supply the demand, and our local dealers say the railway companies are to blame for it A Times reporter on Saturday gained some information on the point which in justice to all concerned, is submitted to its readers The representatives of the railway companies admit the present lack of transportation facilities, but say at the same time that every effort is being made to remedy the evil They are doing the best they can with the facilities at hand, as all admit—and are making every possible effort to get new cars and engines Fifty engines and a large number of cars are now under contract by the Union Pacific management and will be put to work on the Colorado divisions of their road at as early a day as possible The fact is that the business of the state has outgrown the capacities of our railways, just as the population has the capacities of school houses, and the number of houses to rent, and they have not been able to meet it. The revival in business and the sudden increase in trade has been too rapid to be met by the railways, and our manufactures have been overrun with orders which they have not been able to turn out with their usual promptness. The Union Pacific is taxed to its utmost capacity to handle its vast traffic and until it can purchase additional rolling stock, has nothing to spare for the Boulder Valley equipment A city of 40,000 people requires so much more coal than a town of twenty thousand that the demand is beyond the capacity of the transportation and it being so evidently the interest of the company to carry as many tons of coal as possible no one can doubt that they will meet the demand as soon as they are able to do so In the meantime it becomes an interesting question as whether our coal mines are opened to an extent sufficient to meet the present demands upon them in case there was sufficient transportation to haul it Our Colorado coal mines, if properly developed, can do more than supply the home demand they can ship thousands of tons to western Kansas and thus increase largely the industrial product of the state

OUR WATER SUPPLY

Our local columns give an account of the proceedings in the council last night in regard to our water supply, The action taken will commend itself immediately to our readers The extent of the damage was not known or appreciated in the beginning It is easy now to see that the action taken last night should have been taken earlier but it has required experience to teach us The work that is being done has been abandoned because the damage is too great and further expenditure of money would have been wasteful As a temporary relief the council has instructed Mr F S Alexander to put in an engine to pump water from the Monument into the main This will immediately give us plenty of water for household use and in case of fire The greatest danger from our disaster will then be averted Mr Alexander will then inspect the main from the reservoir to the head and report on its condition and advise in what manner the repairs shall be made This will save money to the city in the end The fact that Mr Alexander has charge of this work will at once restore confidence He is a man of great practical experience good judgment and untiring energy With him in charge the water works will be put in good repair at the earliest time possible

While Mr Alexander has not made his report it is probable that he will suggest that the entire main be sunk to a depth of four feet, and that the 13 000 feet of six-inch pipe be replaced with eight-inch pipe It is certain that every pipe must be taken up and examined, so that it should be absolutely certain that there are no cracked ones which may burst and again involve us in our present trouble While this is being done prudence would suggest that the pipes should be sunk to a distance of four feet, so that there may be no possibility of the freezing of the water in the mains hereafter. Covering them with a foot of earth is no more protection than leaving them on the surface The replacing of the six inch pipes with the eight inch pipes is a needed change and can be made with the least expense while the present repairs are being made The eight inch pipes will be needed this summer to supply the water that we need. The six inch pipe will be needed in the city to replace the four inch mains which were entirely inadequate last summer and also for proposed extensions

These repairs will all be necessary to give us a secure and ample supply of water The cost of the improvements will be about $20,000 This is a large sum, but the past few days has demonstrated that the city must have a sure and ample supply of water at any reasonable expense Complaint has been made that these things were not done in the beginning It should be remembered that the council which built the water works had too little money to do the work as it knew was best They were obliged to economise in every way and acted contrary to their judgment in many things The sum voted for bonds was too small, because of a very proper conservative feeling, and the inability of the city to place a large amount of bonds advantageously Our $80 000 in bonds realized a little less than 80 per cent of their face value If the amount had been larger we should have received less than we did If it is decided to spend so large an amount as $20,000 and raise the money by bonds, they can probably be placed at par. Hence, the net loss for the proposed improvements which ought to have been made when the works were built will not be so great. We have somewhat anticipated the report of Mr. Alexander in what we have said, but thought it best to suggest the matter early to our readers so that it may be carefully considered If it is thought necessary to expend as large an amount as $20 000 in repairs and if the council suggests that it be done by issuing bonds, then action should be promptly taken, so that our water supply may be given us at the earliest date It is evident that there should be no mistaken economy We should not hesitate at any reasonable expense All needed improvements which can be judiciously made should be made now,

Makers of Our Constitution

When the constitution was framed it was thought to be one of the most perfect instruments of the kind ever framed and yet in less than five years from its adoption it is found to contain several dangerous fundamental errors the most important one at present being the succession to Governor Tabor [Leadville Herald

A Sunday in Leadville

The various churches were well attended yesterday, and the sermons preached by our divines were more than ordinarily good The subjects discussed were of an attractive and humanitarian nature and not a word was said about the everlasting fires of hell. In fact it would not have been advisable to have done so for yesterday was one of the coldest bleakest and stormiest days ever known in Colorado. [Leadville Chronicle

The Message

The president s message is a very long document but it is not a striking one It is simply a condensation of the reports of the heads of the different departments with some general suggestions added Mr Hayes is a plain, prosy man and his message is a plain, prosy message One [illegible]

LEADVILLE

Bullion Report—Tabor Stamp Mill New Discoveries

The [illegible] December The bullion report for November shows [illegible] in value from that of the month immediately preceding but is [illegible] the same as that of July [illegible] was [illegible] number of tons smelted was [illegible] same indicating a lower average [illegible] of ores [illegible] There has been an increase of reserves the product of the [illegible] tonnage showing an increase [illegible] tions in value of smelting product [illegible] naturally be expected owing to the extremely [illegible] of the ores raised Were the output from high grade and low grade mines this variation would not be so marked Our mine owners as a rule however adopt a settled policy of production and development but follow the promptings of temporary expediency now crowding production to the utmost to the neglect of development and again reducing it to a cipher This is not business mining but Leadville mining Of course there are notable exceptions to this policy but Leadville is yet a long way off from stable mining work The mines are here and many other mines probably of equal or greater value lie hidden in the hills about us every new revelation makes more certain the permanency of our ore production still the fitful fever of speculative mining prevents that steady even advance which follows systematic development and gives unvarying confidence

Among the most sagacious and successful men in Leadville are Messrs. Edward Eddy, W H James and J B Grant comprising the firms of Eddy, James & Co, and J B Grant & Co Their smelting works are the most extensive in the country of the kind The plant at Argo is doubtless more complete and extensive, but the actual smelting product falls far short These gentlemen have shown an abiding faith in the future of Leadville from the outset, and they are now about to give further evidence of it by the expenditure of large sums in still further enlarging and remodeling their smelting plants They have no fears that our mines will soon become exhausted or that the smelting of ores in Leadville will become unprofitable

The amalgamating stamp mill of the Tabor Milling and Mining company will hereafter add its products to the bullion total The plant of this mill costing about $75 000, is probably the most perfect of its class in the state The capacity of the mill is thirty tons per day All grades of ore will be used but whether it will make a better market for low grades is yet to be seen There is a prevailing idea that there are large quantities of low grade ores running from ten to thirty ounces lying upon the dumps everywhere throughout the camp which cheaper processes would render valuable I make bold to assert that outside a half dozen leading mines there are not a thousand tons altogether of such ore available The low grade dumps naturally accumulate in working good mines, but as a rule in this camp where there is marketable ore there is no low grade ore dump of any possible consequence

Some important discoveries of high grade ores have recently been made near Leadville but no public notice has been given them, nor will be definitely until further development Such statements are frequently made without foundation I am speaking from personal knowledge however, and refer to it now simply as additional evidence of the progress and prosperity of the camp. Mr. Carlyle Impeached.

The worst is that Mr Carlyle usually produces his effects at the expense of truth. I do not mean to charge him with misstating facts. He is [illegible] about correctness [illegible] as a modern student [illegible] matters, particularly [illegible] in his estimate of great [illegible] ers, he seems to me [illegible] gard him as the principal [illegible] of that false tendency in history which Macaulay made fashionable, the tendency to substitute a literary for a political estimate. He makes no secret of this tendency, but everywhere [illegible] were introducing a literary and not a new abuse. And yet, as I have [illegible] ry estimate positively [illegible] down. It teaches us [illegible] whatever we most [illegible] ent—bloody catastrophes, [illegible] nes, revolutions. Nothing can exceed the simplicity with which Mr. Carlyle avows that he takes no interest in any [illegible] cessful statesman who has brought happiness to his country, and that he feels no admiration for such a character. In his "Essay on Mirabeau" he rebukes the English public for continuing to repeat the names of Pitt and Fox when heroes like the leaders of the French revolution were soliciting their homage. Of these leaders he selects three, Mirabeau, Danton and Napoleon, whom he is prepared to maintain to be characters of an altogether higher order than Pitt and Fox. Now, on what ground? Evidently because of the terrible events with which they were mixed up. Mr. Carlyle means to [illegible] that stormy scenes in the Tennis court or in the Paris streets, September massacres, battles of Austerlitz, excite his imagination, while regency debates and the like put him to sleep. So feels, no doubt, the literary man in search of a subject. It is little to say that the historian proper judges differently. He reverses the judgment. To him the enormous disquiet of France is the strongest presumptive evidence against the revolutionary statesman and the comparative tranquility of England the best proof of the merit of Pitt and Fox. These general observations upon Mr. Carlyle as a historian have been intended to lead to some remarks on his famous achievement, the rehabilitation of Cromwell. We know what was the old constitutional view of the great rebellion; on one side of politics there was, of course, total disapproval; on the other side vindication and admiration, but most cordially qualified. Hallam, the whig, qualifies his approbation of Pym and Hampden so far as to hint that even at the beginning of the civil war their case was already a bad one. As for the military party, which in the course of 1648 became predominant with Cromwell at its head, he condemns them altogether, and his estimate of Cromwell is singularly severe; though he does justice to his ability. Hallam may be taken to represent the purely political view. In Macaulay the tone taken in a degree more literary. He avoids, apparently with intention, giving any deliberate estimate of Cromwell, but is always warmer and more eloquent than Hallam in speaking of his achievements. Now comes Mr. Carlyle with the purely literary view. He tells us that he has sincerely tried to admire the Pyms and the Hampdens, but at the bottom "he has found that it would not do." Of course not: we are quite prepared to hear that Cromwell seems to him as much superior to Pym and Hampden as Mirabeau, Danton, and Napoleon to Pitt and Fox. For he is thinking of the subject purely as a literary man, and he sees that from a literary point of view there can be no comparison between the hero of Naseby and Dunbar and two civilians, even though those two civilians did set on foot a civil war. Accordingly he throws aside entirely the received opinion, and sets up the military party, rejected before by Whigs and Tories alike, for our admiration. In the midst of this military party, like Charlemagne among his peers or Napoleon among his marshals, stands Cromwell, set high above all the states men of the rebellion, and indeed high above all English statesmen, as a genius of the same order in politics as Shakespeare in literature.—[Prof. Seeley, in Macmillan's Magazine.

A Land of Diamonds.

Perhaps a brief description of this land of gems may interest your readers. This place is about 700 miles inland from Cape Town, and about 500 miles from Port Elizabeth. To reach Kimberly from Cape Town one has to travel through a country called Karroo, a barren, rocky tract, with scarcely any signs of life in it. It is about 300 miles through it. A more desolate region can scarcely be found. I do not think I saw ten acres for a distance of 200 miles that could possibly be plowed; and, judging from appearances, I think a rat, to travel through the Karroo, would need a knapsack on his back, well laden with provisions, to sustain life on his journey, unless he was of near kin to Dr. Tanner. Kimberly, like its surroundings, is a barren waste, very unpleasant for a family home. Most of the country here is worthless for farming purposes. Water is scarce; wood is very scarce. It is brought here by ox teams from a distance of 100 miles, and sold on the market at auction for from $25 to $50 per load, according to size and quality. None of it would be merchantable in your city. Old dead wood dug up by the roots and brought to market, roots and all, sells from $25 to $30 per load, and a load of five wood (unsplit), containing one and a half cords, sells for $40 to $50 per load. Potatoes grow to about the size of an English walnut; beets, carrots, onions, cucumbers, and lettuce are luxuries nearly unknown here. The dust and dirt here is fearful. I can only describe it and do justice to the subject. It fills your eyes, nose and ears, fills your hair and whiskers, and as for clothes, the natives, who wear none, have the advantage, as the water is hard and mineral, [illegible] of dirt, and sells for sixty cents per barrel for washing purposes, and as for drinking, something stronger is the common beverage here.—

But the diamonds! It is truly a land of diamonds. Already over $125,000,000 worth have been discovered. In the later war one of the chiefs (Sacchauni) offered a quart measure full of diamonds for a cannon. Claims of thirty one square feet have sold for $48,000 per claim.

The mines are all worked by large companies. The largest is a French company. [illegible] manager [illegible] were [illegible] take out of the mine [illegible] loads of [illegible] earth per day, which [illegible] average $11 to per load. There are six [illegible] large companies in the same mine. A mile and a half from here is another mine called Old De Beers' Mine. Three miles further there is another one called Du-Toit's Pan, and one mile from that is [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] with what they called "the [illegible]."

There has recently been a diamond [illegible] covered eight miles [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] likes builds the workhouse [illegible] and some explode financial [illegible] [illegible] most [illegible]

The penalty for buying a diamond of a [illegible] is five years' imprisonment at hard labor and a fine of $2,500 for the first offence, and ten years for the second, and yet the temptation is so great that out of a population of 16,000 there are over 100 now in prison for illicit diamond buying and diamond stealing. Some of these prisoners are worth from $4,000 to $200,000. Surely the way of the transgressor is hard.—[South African correspondence to the Hartford Times.

Lady Hester Stanhope at Dar Joon

It was in 1818 that Lady Hester Stanhope took up her abode at Dar Joon, the position of which, at once secluded and commanding, took her fancy. It was a small house standing on the summit of a conically-shaped mount, surrounded on all sides by yawning valleys. It was approached by steep paths running zigzag among masses of rock and low brushwood. At the summit, which presented a flat surface of considerable extent, the vegetation was rich and verdant. She made many alterations in her new residence, which those who saw described as a collection of detached buildings connected by covered alleys. The adjacent ground was converted into a lovely garden, and the whole surrounded by a fortress like wall some 14 feet in height. She assembled around her a household of 30 people, principally Arabs and black slaves. These she ruled with a rod of iron. Once, when she had convicted them of sundry pilferings, she erected a couple of stakes near her door, as a warning to future offenders that they might expect the dread punishment of impalement. The Emir Beshyr, Prince of the Druzes, was the potentate in whose dominions she was now living. She and he had at first been on apparently amicable terms; but they soon became deadly enemies. The emir, a treacherous and suspicious man, grew jealous of her authority in the Lebanon district, and strove to get rid of her. He threatened to bastinado any of the Joon villagers who entered her service; he tried to prevent provisions reaching her from Saida; he set men to guard a spring from which her people fetched water. At one time, indeed, it was given out that he meditated attacking her in her stronghold. The interference of the British ambassador at Constantinople, to whom Lady Hester complained of these insults, brought the Emir to reason, while her ladyship revenged herself at her leisure. The Emir was just then involved in a desperate quarrel with the Turkish governor of Acre, (Abdalla Pasha,) under whose authority he really was, as well as with the Sheykh Beshyr, a rival who disputed his rule. Lady Hester, disgusted by the tales she heard of the Emir's cruelties, and, mindful of his past conduct toward herself, took a secret but active part in this struggle. She subsidized both Abdallah and Sheykh, employed hosts of spies to hamper the Emir, and harbored all the fugitives who fled to her from his wrath. On his sending to demand the surrender of some of some of these fugitives, his messenger was given a flat refusal, with the following instructions: "Tell your master that he is a dog and a monster, and that if he wishes to try his strength with me, I am ready. As years rolled on, Lady Hester, though continuing to figure in all the stirring events which succeeded each other in Syria, turned her thoughts to subjects more abstruse. She acquired or professed to have acquired, a deep knowledge of astrology. This enabled her to prophesy. Her prophecies, otherwise vague, were remarkable as pointing to her own splendid destiny. In her interview with Lamartine (whose star, it seems, agreed with hers,) she spoke at great length of the coming of the Messiah. She showed him also two Arab mares, each of of which had a groom specially appointed to look after her. On these animals which nobody was permitted to mount the prophetess intimated that the Messiah and herself would make their entry into Jerusalem. People who heard her speak like this might have imagined that Lady Hester had taken leave of her senses. But such was not the case. To have drawn the eyes of the world on herself, she would have made, if possible, more startling statements. The accounts given us of her by such visitors as Lamartine, Prince Puckler-Muskau, and the author of "Eothen," are much alike. Knowing that, through them, her portrait would be given to society at home, she passed in their presence as the Circe of Mount Lebanon, and made use of language appropriately mystic. It is from her doctor, who saw her almost daily, the we obtain an idea of the woman as she really was. Her habits, as described by him, were strange. She never opened a book, and would have no time piece [illegible] [illegible] in bed in the early part of the day [illegible] orders, rating her servants, and so on. Towards evening she would rise and come. Afterward, [illegible] [illegible] a tchibouque, she would [illegible] altogether from the stars, and pour forth a stream of gossiping reminiscences of her former life in London. Time and distance had done nothing to diminish her rancorous hatred for England and everything English. Forgetting that she had voluntarily renounced all connection with home and kindred, she sometimes would launch into violent tirades against her relatives for the cruel neglect they showed her. On such occasions she would bewail her forlorn condition with tears and groans, and, [illegible] [illegible] Letter [illegible] had her faithful [illegible] [illegible] reproaches. [illegible]

Some Interesting Figures

[illegible] the [illegible] of mankind [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] between [illegible] [illegible] and Russia of between 25,000,000 and 60,000,000.

In Bavaria out of 1,000 children born alive, here died, of legitimate children, 217 boys and 212 girls; of illegitimate 301 boys and 322 girls. Out of 100 children suckled by their mothers, only 18.2 died during the first year; of those nursed by wet-nurses, 29.33 died; of those artificially fed, 60 died, of those brought up in institutions, 80 died in the 100.

Taking 1,000 well-to do persons and another 1,000 of poor persons—after five years there remained alive of the prosperous, 948, of the poor, only 655. After 50 years there remained of the prosperous, 557; of the poor, 283; at 70 years of age there remained 235 of the prosperous, and of the poor, 65. The average length of life among the well to do was 50 years, and among the poor, 32 years.

The effects of professions and trades on mortality are great, the term of life varying from 65 years 11 months for clergymen, to 40 years and 10 months for lithographers and copper engravers. In England, according to the census office statistics, the duration of life is found most defective among the steel workers, needle makers and grinders; and next to these the life of the collier—that fearless delver in the bowels of the earth—is least secure, owing greatly, no doubt, to the occurrence of accidents in mines.—[Condensed from Kolb's Universal statistics.

New Jokes.

"Come," said the dey of Algiers to the bey of Tunis, "let us go up to Schneider's and try a little Tivoli." "Agreed," was the reply. Schneider set up two schooners, and when they were disposed of the Algerian ruler said: "There's enough for one dey." "Right," replied the Tunisian ruler; "and, I may add, that's the only schooner that will enter the bey of Tunis to-day." [Somerville (Conn.) Journal.

"The Associated Press is a great boon; is it not?" said the cigarette smoking scion of a south side sire to a beautiful Boston girl, full of sentiment and oysters, as they were returning from the theatre. "It is, indeed," she replied, in soft tones; "George and I had one all last winter, but papa came in one night before George could take his arm away and acted dreadfully. Do they have them in Chicago?" "I should blush to murmur," responded the untutored Chicagoan, as he measured her surcingle belt with his strong right arm. [Chicago Times.

An old Vermont farmer came home drunk the other night, and became the victim of an irrepressible desire to get still drunker. So he thought he would bring out his wagon and drove over to Shelburne Falls for more whisky. Just as he was about putting the finishing touches on the harnessing arrangements he said to himself, "This horse has got horns!" He brought out his lantern and found he has harnessed the cow to the wagon. He muttered, "I'm drunk enough now," unhitched the beast and went into the house to sleep it off.—[Rutland (Vt.) Herald.

ST. NICHOLAS FOR 1881

5000 for England, 100,000 for America.

ST. NICHOLAS, the charming magazine for boys and girls, edited by Mrs. Mary Mapes Dodge, has increased so much in size and number of pages during the year past that the publishers have been obliged to issue the yearly volume in two parts, instead of one as heretofore. As to its circulation, they report a gain of 10,000 in the average monthly editions of 1880 over 1870. The announcements for the coming year includes a capital serial story for boys, full of exciting adventure, "In Nature's Wonderland," or, Adventures in the American Tropics; Stories of Art and Artists, by Mrs. Clara Erskine Clement, a faithful outline of the history of European Art, with many illustrations; "Phaeton Rogers," a delightful and humorous serial by Rossiter Johnson; "Mystery in a Mansion," a six months' serial; The Treasure Box of Literature, directing and encouraging young people in the best reading; The Agassiz Association, fully explained in the November number; "Two English Queens," by Mrs. Oliphant; "The Land of Nod," a children's operetta, with music full of charming tableaux and effects; a series of beautifully illustrated Ballads for Young Folks, beginning with the Christmas number; A Special Budget of Fairy Stories by Frank R. Stockton the first of which is in the November number: A Story by "Bright Eyes," the Ponca Indian maiden; a splendid holiday story, "A Christmas with the Man in the Moon," by Washington Gladden. Open-air papers, stories of sports and games, will be continued, with all the popular departments.

Subscriptions beginning with the November issue will include "the wonderful Christmas number," of which the edition will be 5,000 in England and 100,000 in America. The price of this number, to be issued about November 30th, will be 30 cents.

Regular price $3.00 a year: 25 cents a number. For sale, and subscriptions received, by all dealers, or the publishers, Scribner & Co., 743 Broadway, New York.

21 NUMBERS OF SCRIBNER'S FOR $5.

The richly illustrated November number of Scribner's Monthly, the Decennial Issue, appears in a new cover, and begins the twenty-first volume. The increasing popularity of the magazine is strongly evidenced by recent sales. A year ago the monthly circulation was about 90,000 copies; during the past nine months it has averaged 115,000, while the first edition of the November issue is 125,000.

The first part of the now famous serial by Eugene Schuyler, "The Life of Peter the Great," was finished in October. With November begins Part II., "Peter the Great as Ruler and Reformer," which will be an advance, in point of popular interest, and wealth of illustration, upon the part already published. To enable readers to secure Part I, the publishers make the following special offers to new subscribers after October 20th, who begin with the November number.

(1.) New subscribers may obtain, for $5.00 Scribner's Monthly for the coming year, and the previous nine numbers, February to October, 1880 which include Part I. of "Peter the Great," Mrs. Burnett's "Louisiana," etc. In accepting this offer, twenty one numbers will be had for $5.00.

(2.) They may obtain the previous twelve numbers of Scribner's, elegantly bound in olive-green cloth (two volumes), containing Part I. of Peter the great, all of Cable's novel, "The Grandissimes," with the numbers named above, and a year's subscription, for $7.50. (Regular price, $10.00.)

All book sellers or news dealers will take subscriptions and supply the numbers and volumes mentioned in the above special offers, without extra charge for postage or express; or the publishers, Scribner & Co., 743 Broadway, New York, may be addressed direct. The regular price of Scribner's is $4.00 a year, 35 cents a number.

BARDELL VERSUS PICKWICK

A Celebrated Case Successfully Tried in Court House Hall

The case of Bardell vs Pickwick was presented by the Literary Union of the Congregational church in Court House Hall last evening to a large and enthusiastic audience. The entertainment was presented in two parts the first being the alleged proposal of Mr Pickwick and the second the trial scene which was the natural result of Mr Pickwick's imprudent conduct

Hunt's orchestra furnished the music for the occasion and added much to the pleasure of the evening by their artistic performance. The trial of Pickwick was represented by the following

Mrs Elizabeth Cluppins	Miss Lizzie Carroll

Of course the central figures of the evening were those of Mr Pickwick and Mrs Bardell and it would be difficult to find better presentations of these two eccentric characters than were given last evening. Mr F. B. Hill, as the persecuted gentleman who founded the club made famous in history, was inimitable and brought down the house by his excellent acting.

Mrs H L. Parker, as the widow who had lodgings to let to single gentlemen and whose affections were blighted by the philandering Pickwick, looked and played the character to the life and was received with frequent applause

Mr Frank Wilder, as Master Bardell, made a great success by his natural and spirited performance and became a prime favorite with the audience.

Mr. L A Chandler, as Augustus Snodgrass, who was "a little hard of hearing," scored a great success by his impersonation and fully deserved the hearty tokens of approval which he received

Miss Lizzie Carroll as Mrs Elizabeth Cluppins was successful in giving a very humorous delineation of the character, and her story from the witness box of how she entered Mrs Bardell's second floor back "promiscuous like" was received with great laughter

Miss Annie Tuck gave a successful impersonation of Mrs Susannah Sanders whose testimony in the case was limited to what she had heard the clear starcher say and the relation of her experience when Mr. Sanders asked her to name the day

Sergeant Buzfuz represented by Dr Gatchell, made two very eloquent addresses to the court and jury and browbeat the witnesses with great success except in the examination of Mr. Snodgrass and Sam Weller

Mr. E P Wright showed fine abilities as Mr. S Kimpin, junior counsel for the plaintiff. His simulation of an earnest desire to scare the life out of the witnesses examined by him was excellent and was fully appreciated by the audience

Mr J C Ratliff and C W Brooks as Sergeant Snubbin and Mr Phunkey counsel for the defendant were excellent and carried their parts with great success, While Mr. Perker, defendant's solicitor represented by Mr E C. Steers gave thorough satisfaction.

Mr Nathaniel Winkle was represented by Mr F W Tuckerman in a manner which produced much laughter and which secured the deserved reward of hearty applause

Mr Lemuel Cushing, as clerk of the court, acted as the Irishman said "like a man of experience" and the part could not have been better rendered by the original clerk himself

Last, but not least in this review, comes Mr. Justice Stareleigh, personated by Col L T Ensign. The judicial dignity of this model interpreter of the law was something quite awe inspiring, and his charge to the jury was profound and delivered with immense effect

The whole entertainment passed off very pleasantly and received the tribute of applause and laughter. We cannot close this review without saying that we were informed by a large number of ladies and gentlemen of the audience that a great part of the success of the evening was owing to the remarkable facial expression of Mrs Bardell otherwise known as Mrs H. L Parker. To her and to Mr Pickwick is largely ... the satisf... character of the entertainment, although of course the excellent support rendered by the other ladies and gentlemen of the cast contributed to the success

Prof C B Plummer the elocutionist will give an entertainment in Court House Hall on Friday evening. The professor is well known to many of our citizens as he has appeared here upon several occasions. Prof Plummer as a delineator of character is highly spoken of

Mr J H ... day yesterday with a force of men prospecting along the pipe from Hermann's eastward. He found that the water had frozen in the pipes all the way from Hermann's through Camp Creek and beyond Old Town which was as far as he had prospected. It looks now as though the entire line of pipe would have to be stripped and the ice melted out. The work of stripping the pipe is a very tedious one for the earth is frozen almost as hard as stone and the blows of a pick make but little impression upon it. Another cause of delay is the fact that the men have to dig transverse trenches to discover the exact line of the pipe, the surface having become smoothed down and homogenous with the rest of the ground. The freezing of the pipes has proved a very much greater calamity than was at first anticipated

MEETING OF THE CITY COUNCIL

A special meeting of the city council was held last night for the purpose of considering the water question. Mr E S Alexander, one of the contractors who constructed the water works, was present at the meeting and gave his views regarding the probable damages. Mr. Alexander said that he had not inspected the mains but that he had received sufficient information to convince him that it would require considerable time to repair the damage sustained. He recommended that the council purchase a steam force pump and connect it with the main where it crosses the Monument and force sufficient water into the city pipes for temporary use from Monument creek

The council considered the proposition as made by Mr Alexander to be a feasible one and Alderman Frown offered a resolution to the effect that Mr Alexander be empowered to proceed at once to Denver and either purchase or lease an engine for this purpose which was unanimously carried. Mr Alexander stated that an engine could be procured and placed in position within three days time which would have sufficient power to supply the city's demand. The engine he has in view will pump about 100 000 gallons a day. At night, at least, it is estimated that it will much more than supply the demand and the surplus water will be forced into the reservoir. It will thus be seen that the city will derive the same pressure as it has had heretofore. Mr Alexander left for Denver this morning. He will probably secure the engine and ship it this afternoon

Mr Douglas Ely the superintendent of water works was instructed to discontinue the work at Manitou for the present and to shut off the water at the head until some different arrangement can be made. The work so far has only been of a temporary nature and it was deemed advisable to save further expense

FORGING THE NAME OF FOSS

Leadville Swindlers Fleece Merchants Out of About Six Thousand Dollars

The following account of the forging of the signature of Mr Simon H Foss formerly of this city is taken from the Leadville Herald of yesterday. One of the neatest schemes to swindle yet attempted in this vicinity has been unearthed in this city within the past few days, and although the amount of money dishonestly gained or the swindlers operating the scheme are not known it is hoped that the publicity given the facts will discourage any further attempts on the part of the thieves to continue their avocations. It is believed that the merchants have lost in the aggregate about $6 000

"For some time the merchants of the city have been complaining greatly of the proceedings of certain men who obtained fraudulently goods in this manner ... man enters a grocery store and orders a large amount of goods ... amount ... careful ... believe ... and seeing ... fire of those ... chasing. "Well doctor what kind of a trip did you have

"Splendid, splendid" replied the doctor. "We sailed in the Brittanica had a smooth voyage the whole distance over so that we all had good opportunities to practice walking and getting ourselves in trim for the arduous duties before us. For myself I walked every day from my state room to the smoking room and initiated a good many of the passengers into that Colorado exhilerating game of Hanky Pancky. This kept their muscles in working order. We landed in Liverpool and had some foot races in London the Australian won the heat. To see London you must be there during some great foot race. I was at the Doncaster race and must say I have seen better races on our own track. Visited the Tower and saw all the old armors and things worn by those bandits of olden times. Grandell's racing shoes were not in the collections. I was a little disappointed at this as I thought some memento of him should be preserved

"But doctor, how about the climate?"
